

E-magazine

Reflection

In this project we were going to create an e-magazine with a theme of our own choice. We had to make a website, or landing page, where readers could sign up to get the magazine and an app-icon for App-store and Play store. I was looking forward to this project because it seems like something I possibly want to work with in the future.

Teamwork

In the last project I had a hard time because I felt like my teammates' ambitions weren't the same as mine. Therefore I made sure that in this project I worked together with people I knew I worked well with. And I was right. In this project the teamwork was much better than the last. I felt comfortable and it seems like we have a similar sense of aesthetics, which makes it all much easier.

My work

I started out contacting people I wanted to work with, even before we knew if we were going to pick our own groups. But then I fell ill with influenza and couldn't work on the project for the first week. It frustrated me that I couldn't do my part of the work. I don't like feeling that I can't do anything and that I'm not helping out. That meant that for most of the project I didn't do much. I ended up creating the app-icon and putting together the report.

Response

(Coming soon)

Ideas for changes

(Coming soon)

Afterthought

During the project I got a lot of ideas on how to use ebooks for other things than magazines. So even though I didn't work much on the ebook in this project I really want to work more with it in the future. Get to know more about how it works and what it can do.

Go back to the website